Family Commutation, 50 trips, $7.50.
Commutation, 3 months, $19.

As quickly reached from the City Hall, New York, as is Twenty-third Street by the elevated road. This healthy, thriving town of 4000 inhabitants is the residence of many New York business men, whose elaborate dwellings and elegant grounds show cultivated taste. Situated in the midst of the high, rolling country lying between the "Meadows" and the Passaic River, a natural drainage is afforded which cannot be excelled by art. Enjoyable drives in every direction; good fishing and boating in Passaic River; woodcock and snipe shooting in Jersey Meadows. Good public and private schools and churches of every denomination. Excellent stores and markets of all kinds.

BOARDING HOUSES.

LYNDHURST—DAVID H. SPEER, Proprietor, Lyndhurst P. O.—1 mile; on Passaic River; pleasure steamer lands daily at the Lyndhurst dock. 8 single, 7 double rooms; adults, $7 to $10; children and servants, $5; $2 and $2.50 per day. Own livery; new billiard parlor and ball room.

4 trains to New York week days.

Fare one way, 40 cents.

Round trip, 55 cents.

Family Commutation, 50 trips, $10.

Commutation, 3 months, $21.

Garfield is one of the most progressive towns along the line of the "Picturesque Erie." The town was founded by Gilbert D. Bogart, an enterprising New Yorker, about four years ago, and lies directly opposite the city of Passaic, on the Bergen County short-cut of the Erie. Population, 500. Good public school, Presbyterian church, and excellent stores. The river Passaic is spanned by an iron bridge, which connects Garfield with Passaic. The growth of this place has been marvelous. Last year thirty-seven houses were built, and there will be sixty more erected the present season.

The town is inhabited by New Yorkers. There is a good hotel and several boarding houses in the place. It takes but thirty-five minutes to reach the town from the metropolis.

BOARDING HOUSE.

J. U. LEMON—5 minutes' walk. 5 single rooms, 1 double room; adults, $5 to $7; children, $3; servants, $6; $1.50 per day; discount for season. Good gunning and fishing; bass, pickerel, &c.

PASSAIC,
PASSAIC COUNTY, N. J.

12½ miles from New York.
 22 trains from New York week days.
 25 trains to New York week days.
 11 trains from New York Sundays.
 9 trains to New York Sundays.
 Fare one way, 40 cents.
 Round trip, 55 cents.
 Family Commutation, 50 trips, $10.
 Commutation, 3 months, $21.

A place of metropolitan culture and enterprise, situated in the elevated country just beyond the Passaic River. Population, 12,000, with a steady yearly increase. Many elegant and costly residences, excellent schools, both public and private, and churches of every denomination. The shops and stores are well stocked. Streets broad and well lighted, and there are upwards of fifty miles of flagged sidewalks. Surrounding country high and healthy. Fine drives in every direction, and good boating and fishing in the river; Dundee Lake but three miles away.

"The Citizens' Association," composed of wealthy and prominent citizens of Passaic, has for its object the permanent improvement of the city in the way of pavements, water works, sewers, street-car lines, public baths, &c., &c., and under its auspices Passaic is rapidly becoming a model inland city.

BOARDING HOUSES.

Mrs. H. R. WELLS—6 minutes' walk. 3 single and 7 double rooms; adults, $6 to $10; transient rates, $1.50 per day; children, according to age. Good livery.

10 trains from New York week days.

8 trains to New York week days.

8 trains from New York Sundays.

4 trains to New York Sundays.

Fare one way, 45 cents.

Round trip, 65 cents.

Family Commutation, 50 trips, $11.25.

Commutation, 3 months, $21.50.

This exceptionally healthy town of 600 inhabitants is located in the midst of a gently undulating country. Union church, used by all denominations, also used on occasions of public entertainments. Good public school, with about 200 pupils. Driving park in centre of town. Good hotel near beautiful grove. Surroundings delightful; fine drives to Paterson, Passaic, Rutherford, and Hackensack. Roads broad, solid, and clean. Dundee Lake and Passaic River only a short walk. Good fishing and gunning near at hand. Dwellings tasteful in style and comfortably appointed, many having superior water and drainage facilities.

HOTEL.

SAMUEL GODSCHALK, Proprietor—2 minutes' walk. 16 single rooms, 2 double rooms; adults, $7; children and servants, $5; $2 per day; discount for season. Good livery, $5 per day.

is romantic, the Passaic Falls being second only to Niagara in grandeur. There are many choice drives, and numerous handsome churches, schools, &c. The stores and shops of Paterson are exceptionally well stocked, and residents of the outlying towns on either side—Clifton, Lake View, Garfield, Hawthorne, Ridgewood, &c.—find it of great convenience for shopping and marketing purposes. While Paterson makes no particular provision for the summer boarder, there are many hotels which furnish excellent accommodations to the visitor.

A suburb of Paterson. Situated between that city and the village of Clifton, this quiet village partakes of the characteristics of both places. Population, 500. The residence of many New York business men. Natural drainage, and abundance

This city is essentially one of industry and trade: The third city in the State in population (70,000), and one of the greatest in the Union in importance, variety, and extent of its manufacturing interests. The scenery round about Paterson is

Of the Passaic Falls, both as a prominent factor in the manufacturing industries of the city of Paterson and as possessing great natural beauty, a recent writer states: "‘The Great Falls of the Passaic’ are one of the features of the city. The power furnished by them was the original inducement for the location of a city at their base. Passaic Falls have long been conceded as unmatched for their picturesque surroundings, even as they are undoubtedly unique in their configuration. The Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures in Paterson early saw the great power and promise of the Falls of Passaic from a manufacturing standpoint, and by a special charter, granted by the State of New Jersey, this Society was given almost unlimited authority in the direction of establishing an available water-power and the desired manufactures." Of the changes made at and about the Falls since the Society began its operations, the writer continues: "At first a slender dam was built, 200 yards higher up stream than the present one just above the Falls. * * * The present existing dam was constructed in 1838-40, of immense blocks of stone, bolted together to their rock-bed with powerful clamps of iron. The water is thus diverted into an artificial channel constructed across the deep ravine and through the rocks, which barely permit its passage. From this point it is made to turn in succession three tiers of factories, the height of the Fall allowing three raceways, the water being used successively that number of times, after which it is once more discharged into the river, at a distance of scarcely half a mile from the point of leaving it."

"The Great Falls of the Passaic, or ‘Passaich,’ as it was called in the early days, have the extraordinary water-shed of over 800 square miles. The minimum supply for mill purposes in a dry season is fifty square feet, the average flow, of course, being vastly greater. The aggregate horse-power is 2640. Much the greater portion of the horse-power still remains the property of the Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures."

HAWTHORNE,
PASSAIC COUNTY, N. J.

18 $\frac{1}{4}$ miles from New York.
14 trains from New York week days.
10 trains to New York week days.

Surrounded by most romantic and picturesque scenery, this charming village offers rare attractions to him who would pitch his tent in the midst of rural beauty. The Hohokus Creek, from which the town derives its name, is a swift-running stream, its fountain head being a series of spring-fed lakelets far up among the hills, from which it comes coursing down through the "Sylvan Glen," a densely-wooded ravine, with here and there a rock-bound spring of ice-cold water, providing a delightfully cool and refreshing retreat during the hot summer days. The town and surrounding country are remarkably healthy; no malaria, no chills—excellent surface drainage and pure cold spring water in abundance. From the hill-tops magnificent views of the country for miles around are to be had, and there are splendid walks and drives in every direction. Exceptionally good fishing and gunning. Hohokus has a population of 1000, good public and private schools, a Catholic, a Reformed, and a Methodist church, and two good general stores.

IN THE RAMAPO VALLEY.

At Suffern the Erie swings into the Ramapo Valley, through a narrow defile. For fifteen miles the valley extends, mountain-bound, and at times it is of barely sufficient width to allow the passage, side by side, of the river, the historic post road, and the Erie, while again it will widen out into a dell or ravine which marks the course of a mountain rill or torrent. Here and there, too, the mountains recede, and the valley spreads itself into a fertile plain, and in these occasional plateaus nestle, in the order named, the little hamlets of Hillburn, Ramapo, Sterlington, Sloatsburg, Tuxedo Park, Southfields, and Arden. The river itself is a panorama of rare beauty. Its headwaters are in a series of mountain springs and lakes, and in its course through the valley it first meanders across the flat lands, then sinks into a narrow, deep bowl, to widen presently into a placid lake, and finally, before its exit into the level country beyond the valley, it tumbles over a ledge of rocks, and falls, a seething, roaring mass, to its rocky bed full fifty feet below. In the quiet portions the boating is charming; the banks now and then open into snug grottoes and dells, down which come sparkling, splashing streams from the rock-bound springs above, while the dense overhanging foliage affords a refreshing shade, and there are many sheltered pools where the bathing is delightful. The river, as well as the mountain lakes from which it springs, is populous with game fish, and in the wooded mountains small game of every variety is plentiful, insuring to the visitor the best of sport with rod or gun.

The Ramapo country is in every way charming, and in the way of convenient and well-appointed retreats, eminently well arranged for the accommodation of the summer visitor.

Situate on the east side of the rocky pass of the Ramapo, Suffern, with its surroundings, presents a choice picture of natural beauty. Southward and eastward from the mountains, as far as the eye can reach, the landscape is made up of rolling woodland, interspersed with thrifty farms. From the summit of "Old Houverkopf," on the west side of the rocky pass, a view of many hundred square miles of mountain and plain can be had. Through this broad expanse many a brook and rivulet makes its way to the Ramapo, and dotted here and there are numerous lakes and ponds. The hunter or fisher in this region may always count on the best of luck. The entire country is exceptionally healthy. Leading physicians specially recommend its climate to sufferers from bronchial and pulmonary affections.

There are delightful drives in every direction. The beautiful Sterling Lake is but twelve miles away. The population of Suffern numbers 1200. It has broad streets and attractive homes, and there are many well-appointed country seats and prosperous farms. Effective drainage and an abundance of spring and well water. Good stores and shops. One public and two private schools; a Catholic, a Methodist, and an Episcopalian church.

Named from a beautiful lake a mile and a half distant, which is famous as a fishing ground. The lake, together with about 6000 acres of the country immediately surrounding it, is owned by the Tuxedo Park Association, which, composed of wealthy gentlemen of New York, was organized some three years ago for the purpose of converting this property into a colossal game preserve and sporting ground, and so much has been done toward accomplishing this object that this resort is now probably the most extensive and complete of its kind in the world. The grounds are elaborately laid out in a system of boulevards and mountain drives. Tasteful cottages and villas abound, and on the shore of the lake is the extensive club-house of the Association, which is provided with every modern convenience for the accommodation and entertainment of members and their guests.

Best of bass fishing in the Delaware, at the village. Population, 14,000. Good public and private schools, and churches of all denominations. First-class shops and stores of all kinds. East of the town, its summit reached by an easy wagon road, is High Point, among the Shawangunks. Here lies a lake of striking beauty, rock bound and cool, and well-stocked with salmon, rendering it a favorite resort. The farther Catskills and the gap in the Kittatinny Mountains, forty miles away, are plainly visible from this point. Roomy stages run between Port Jervis, Milford, and Dingman's, the fare for the trip being 50 cents in the day-time, and 75 cents at night. Private conveyance may be ordered by telegraph. The number of streams which are easily reached from this village is almost legion. Within a few miles from here are Basha's Kill, the Shingle Kill, the Bushkill, the Neversink, Mongaup, the Beaverkill, the Willowemoc, and hundreds of smaller streams with no names at all.

Northern Newark has a frontage of more than one mile on the west bank of the Passaic River, which presents a charming picture at this point; and besides providing a natural drainage for the rolling land which descends in a series of natural terraces from the very top of Orange Mountain, which forms a background to the picture, it offers at this point one of the best boating courses in the country, and many famous rowing contests have been decided here. There are any number of tasteful dwellings with elegant grounds, and many New York business men make their home here. The population, which is about 15,000, is increasing more rapidly than any other portion of the city. The streets are broad, macadamized, and well lighted, and on several, cars are run at convenient intervals. There are many superior schools, both public and private, churches of all denominations, and well-appointed shops and stores.

AMONG THE HUDSON HIGHLANDS, VIA NEWBURGH SHORT CUT.

Some of the most beautiful and healthful country on the line of the Erie is found along the "Short Cut," which extends from Turners to Newburgh, the greater part of the way hugging the base of a lofty wall of mountains. This range is cut with deep glens and valleys, and in its rocky crests it holds many a shimmering lake. Aside from the delightful scenery of the highland region and the historic interest attached to it, the experience of years has demonstrated the fact that the air which circulates among these hills and valleys is possessed of curative properties that render the existence of pulmonary and bronchial affections next to an impossibility. From the Schunemunk Range to the Cornwall Hills, it is stated that there is a well-defined line which marks the boundaries of this rare mountain atmosphere, and that the area of its presence is within the mountain elevations just mentioned. There are innumerable instances of invalids being restored to robust health by a few seasons spent in this natural sanitarium.

Not less than five thousand people annually summer in the Cornwall district, and among the guests who are now regular annual visitors there are many who came to Cornwall as invalids years ago. Physicians send patients to Cornwall for affections that it was formerly thought could not be benefited in a climate other than the Bahamas, Bermudas, or the Lake Superior region. Storm King and Old Cro' Nest, two rugged crags, belong to Cornwall. The drives to West Point, to Newburgh, and to New Windsor, and the hundreds of shorter mountain drives and walks, are unsurpassed. Population, 2000. Good schools, both public and private, and churches of all denominations. Good shops and stores.

Vail's Gate is one of the oldest towns in this section, and was settled in 1720. There is still standing a stone house which was occupied by Generals Gates and St. Clair, when the army occupied the Highlands. An ancient Indian burying ground, covering several acres, lies on the bank of a stream that meanders through the place. The surrounding country is beautiful with rolling wood and farm land, interspersed with clear running streams from the mountains. Population, 300. A good public school and Methodist Church. There are few stores, the residents preferring to run into Newburgh, but a short distance away, for trading.

Overlooking the city of Newburgh and the beautiful Newburgh Bay, and surrounded by the mountains and streams of the Highlands, New Windsor offers superior attractions as a summer resting place. It has a good public school, and churches of Presbyterian and Episcopalian denominations; one general store. It is probably the oldest village in Orange County, and there is no place of more interest to the antiquarian. The ruins of the famous "Temple of Virtue," erected near the village by Washington, in 1782, are still to be seen. During the Revolution muskets and bayonets for the army were made at a forge near the town. In 1782-3 Generals Green and Knox had their headquarters at John Ellison's, while Lafayette was quartered at William Ellison's stone mansion, still standing. Four miles west of the town is Washington Square, where General Clinton was quartered with Mrs. Fall. These are a few of the many historic incidents that add to the charm of New Windsor.

Population, 25,000. First settled in 1708. It is truly a city built on a hill, and the view up and down the river, from almost any point, is extensive and varied. Newburgh Bay, one of the finest configurations of the Hudson, is alone sufficient to give wide reputation to the town. To its Revolutionary associations, however, is due the fact that Newburgh is a place dear to every American heart. On an eminence overlooking the broad expanse of the bay is the old Hasbrouck Mansion, occupied by Washington as headquarters in 1782-83. The location of this old building is one of the most beautiful on the river. The eye takes in at a glance the Highlands, the villages in Dutchess County, and the grand surroundings of the more distant landscape. Numerous mountain glens meet the eye in the elevated masses on every hand. To the south, Butter Hill, or Storm King, as it is now called, looms up like a grim sentinel, while to the north the high promontory of the Dans Kammer, old in legend, stands out against the sky in bold relief. At the southern entrance to the bay is the bare and hoary Pollipelo Island, while the crests of the Beacon Hills recall with vividness the days when their watchfires signaled the patriot bands encamped within sight of them. This wonderful picture invariably bids the spectator pause on the very threshold of the historic mansion to drink in the beauties of the scene. In this old building Washington matured the plans which led to the final triumph of the American arms, and it is in nearly the same condition as when the Father of his Country left it after the war was over. It is filled with the rarest relics of the early days, and is become the shrine of patriotism to the whole people of the nation, and is daily visited by hundreds. Unsurpassed boating and fishing in the bay. Orange Lake, 6 miles distant; bass and pickerel. Fine drives to Cornwall, West Point, and all places in the Highlands. Churches of all denominations.

FROM GREYCOURT TO WARWICK.

From Greycourt the Lehigh & Hudson River Railway (formerly operated as the Warwick Branch of the Erie) extends westward through one of the most charming portions of Orange County. The adjacent country is made up of undulating farm land dotted here and there with sparkling lakelet and with cosy hamlet, with just enough forest growth to give an enjoyable variety to a charming landscape; all this set in a framework of wooded mountains. The road runs through the heart of the Orange County dairy region. The healthfulness of the entire country is proverbial, and with its superior facilities for driving, riding, rambling, fishing, and general "outing," it offers rare inducements to the summer tourists.

honnk and Minnewaska. Surrounded by precipitous shores and dense forests, where rocky caverns with subterranean streams and perpetual ice challenge the adventurous, and mystify and charm all, these lakes have taken front rank among the most popular resorts of the country. The great height here affords a view of a large part of the Eastern and Middle States. They are easily reached by an enjoyable drive from New Paltz Station. Mohonk is six and Minnewaska sixteen miles from New Paltz.

THE LOWER DELAWARE VALLEY.

MILFORD,

PIKE COUNTY, PA.

95 miles from New York.

Stage fare, night time, 75 cents.

A drive of seven miles from Port Jervis, over a road as hard as cement and wonderfully smooth, running along the base of a lofty and precipitous range of mountains, brings the tourist to the village of Milford, the favorite summer home of hundreds of city people. Milford lies on a broad plateau, 200 feet above the Delaware River, commanding a view up the valley that is indescribably beautiful, taking in the mountains, vales, plains, and forests of three States—the Delaware winding through the landscape and visible for miles.

High hills surround the village on three sides, over which shaded roads lead to the many interesting points in the vicinity. The streets of the village are broad and free from dust, and are bordered by splendid maple trees. There are no pools of standing or stagnant water, marshes, nor low lands anywhere in the vicinity of the place. There are four churches—Presbyterian, Episcopal, Methodist, and Catholic.

A quarter of a mile from the village, and reached by a romantic footpath, is the "Knob," a bold mountain peak which rises nearly 1000 feet above the place; its summit affords a favorite outlook with summer boarders, as the country for forty miles around is brought beneath the gaze. A stretch of meadow slopes from the base of the Knob to the Sawkill Creek, which runs between the mountain and the village, and, tumbling over an ancient dam, winds about in the Glen—a place of stately pines, picturesque islands, isolated walks and nooks among overhanging rocks, wooded knolls, miniature water-falls—a place of perpetual shade. No hotel or boarding house in Milford is more than ten minutes' walk from this charming spot. A mile from Milford are the Sawkill Falls, famed for their surroundings, which are weird in the extreme.

A mile below Milford begin the Cliffs, a wall of perpendicular rock two miles in length, towering 800 feet above the road which passes down the valley at its feet. The Cliffs are easy of access by a mountain road, which continues along their summit, from which elevation a great part of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, the Catskills, the Blue Ridge, and the Kittatinny Mountains, with their numerous peaks and gaps are in plain view. Three miles below Milford, reached either by the river road or a mountain road in the interior, are the Falls of the Raymondskill, the surroundings of which are the wild woods and the towering hills—the very home of solitude.

The Delaware River, for a mile in front of Milford, widens into a still, deep, eddying body of water, more like a lake than a river. A finer place for boating or fishing does not exist. During the black bass season, which opens July 1, and continues through the year, this part of the river is covered with the boats of those who love this most exciting sport, and the scene is picturesque and enlivening. Sportsmen will find attendants and boats at any time in Milford.

There are several mountain lakes of great beauty in the vicinity of Milford, all stocked with pickerel and other choice fish. Among these lakes are the Sawkill, Little and Big Brink, the two Log Taverns, and the two Walker ponds. Excursions to these lakes are popular pastimes during the summer season.

Midway between the magnificent surroundings of Dingman's—soon to be described—and those of Milford is Conashaugh Spring, on the beautiful Conashaugh Brook, and in a valley that is simply charming. A step or two from the brook, and perpetually shaded by the trees that stand thickly about, is the Conashaugh Spring, a pool of the coldest, purest, crystal water, bubbling out of the earth through sand white as snow. Three ragged mountain peaks rise in the immediate vicinity—one at least 800 feet high—cone shaped and covered with forest trees, shutting in the spot as by a wall, and consigning it to seclusion that is its greatest charm.

DINGMAN'S FERRY,
PIKE COUNTY, PA.

103 miles from New York.

15 miles from Port Jervis.

Stage connections according to the season.

Visitors prefer private conveyance as a rule.

It is an easy and delightful drive of two hours from Port Jervis to this popular retreat. It is an old village, and in the centre of a "scenic wonder-land." The endless chain of mountains that hems it about is traversed by streams of considerable size, which, rising in the still higher lands of the "back country," are literally hurled and tumbled over precipices and obtruding rocks, from the time they leave the parent springs until they reach the level of the valley, over a thousand feet below. They have worn deep ravines and curious chambers in the rocks; hollowed out, by continuous falling, basins where the waters scethe and boil, and flow through chasms to the bottom of which the sun has never cast a beam. In the vicinity of Dingman's Ferry six of these streams thunder down the mountain. The Dingman Creek and Adam's Creek are particularly prolific in these grand works of nature. Their cataracts and glens and gorges annually furnish subjects to both poet and painter. The Factory Falls, Fulmer Falls, High Falls and Silver-Thread Falls, on the former stream, are equal to any in the Catskills. High Falls is a wild reach of stream two hundred feet in extent—a high perpendicular leap, then a gathering of the waters, and then a thundering plunge down the slanting but angular face of the rocks. Factory Falls is a tumultuous dropping of the waters of the creek wrought to their utmost fury by sharp projecting rocks and frequent precipices, until they writhe and contort themselves into such shapes as have gained them the name of Maniac Waters. Fulmer Falls are a series of most picturesque cataracts. The Silver-Thread Fall is the crowning beauty of these mountain torrents. It is a thread of water but a few feet wide, but it comes with one continuous fall of one hundred and fifty feet down the face of the mountain, every drop of water being lashed into the whitest foam. Standing at the side of the troubled pool which receives the waters after their plunge, the visitor may look up along the course of the Silver Thread, and see a patch of blue sky at the farther end. The falls on Dingman Creek are within from one to three miles of the High Falls House, the proprietor of which has rendered them easy of access, they having formerly been reached with great difficulty. Adam's Creek, on which there are a still greater number of natural curiosities, is a mile from Dingman's Ferry. Like Dingman and the other creeks in this vicinity, it is a famous trout stream, and a favorite resort of many persons prominent in letters and art.

The Bushkill Falls are thirteen miles from Dingman's; the Delaware Water Gap twenty-five. Conveyances are furnished at Dingman's for visiting all these attractions in the valley.

Here, 1500 feet above the ocean, is one of the most charming villages in the State. It is connected with the Erie by the Port Jervis, Monticello & New York Railroad, which traverses the picturesque Neversink Valley and the wild country adjacent to it. The village itself is on rolling land, and its residences and private grounds are extremely attractive. High hills rise on every side, from which extensive views of the rugged outlying country may be enjoyed. The atmosphere is pure and bracing, and fevers of any kind never originate in this region. The air is peculiarly favorable to asthmatics and persons afflicted with kindred diseases. A mosquito would be a curiosity in this section, and heat never interferes with sleep, and neither dampness nor fog render evening or morning disagreeable.

There are trout streams in the vicinity, and the best of bass fishing in Pleasant Lake, a beautiful sheet of water one mile distant. Katrina Falls, a picturesque cataract, with grand surroundings; Edward's Island, in the Neversink, and Strange's Grove, are favorite retreats about the village. Besides the unsurpassed fishing found in the vicinity of Monticello, the autumn season brings abundance of game, partridge and other small game being especially plenty. The churches of the village are an Episcopal, a Methodist, a Presbyterian, and a Catholic.

The drive from Monticello to this place is one of the features of the region. The road leads over high hills by easy grades, and across deep valleys noisy with dashing brooks. Some of the finest views in the country are met with between White Lake and Monticello. White Lake Village has its name from the large and beautiful sheet of water that lies at the feet of the mountains lifting up their heads about it. The lake is of great depth and purity, and is really one immense spring of living water. It formerly abounded in trout of a size rarely attained by that species of fish, it being on record that they have been caught in the lake weighing nearly nine pounds. Some years ago, however, pickerel were placed in these waters, and they exterminated the trout. To compensate for the loss of the latter, the lake was subsequently stocked with black bass from Lake George, and the favorite sport of black bass fishing is now one of the great attractions of White Lake. Bass weighing five and six pounds are frequently taken.

As long ago as 1846 White Lake was a popular summer resort, and a hotel was erected for the especial accommodation of city guests. The natural attractions of the place, together with its wonderful healthfulness, have drawn people to it annually in increased numbers, until to-day few resorts equal it in the number and high character of its boarding houses. From any of the near by eminences the whole scope of this beautiful section is brought beneath the gaze. The prominent features of the near-by landscape are the circling lake and the sloping front of Mount Wilder, which rises from the south shore to an altitude of 800 feet above the water.

The outlying country is much of it deep forest, where deer and other wild game still abound. In fact, the sojourner at White Lake finds the advantage of civilization and the charm of the vast wilderness combining to make the place unlike any other resort of its class in the country, and one that it takes more than a single season to "do" properly and satisfactorily. Boats, fishing tackle, &c., are furnished guests by all hotels and boarding houses. They also run carriages to and from Monticello trains during the season. There are Presbyterian and Reformed churches at White Lake, and a Methodist church at Mongaup Valley, a drive of four miles.

A quiet and enjoyable resort among the mountains. Delaware River close at hand. The glen, from which the town derives its name, is picturesque in the extreme, and provides delightful rambles to those who locate in the vicinity. Population, 75. Best of fishing and gunning, and good drives in every direction. The surroundings are similar in character to those of Sparrowbush, and the general description of that place applies equally to Parker's Glen.

On the banks of the Delaware, 1000 feet above the sea. Romantic Pike and Sullivan County scenery. Population, 300. Good public school, Methodist, Congregational, and German Lutheran churches, and good stores. Shohola Creek, a celebrated trout stream, enters the Delaware here. Panther Brook, another trout stream, with fine cataracts, enters just above. The Falls of the Shohola are a great attraction. Nine mountain lakes reached easily, the farthest being nine miles distant; Hagan, Hagai, Big, Montgomery, Sand, and York, in Sullivan County, and Big and Little Brink, and Big and Little Walker, in Pike County, all stocked with bass and pickerel. Bass fishing in the Delaware. Deer, bear, fox, rabbit, partridge, and woodcock shooting in season.

Shohola is the station from which a picturesque portion of Sullivan County, in the vicinity of Eldred—among the Sullivan highlands and lakes—is reached by an enjoyable drive of five miles. One of the finest game and fishing regions in Sullivan County.

Within a short walk from the station is the famous

SHOHOLA GLEN,

A wonderful exhibit of caverns, cascades, and waterfalls, which has been converted into an immense pleasure resort, and is visited daily during the season by hundreds of people. It is a favorite resort for schools, clubs, societies, and the like from New York and adjacent cities. The summer visitor is particularly commended to this rare spot in Erie territory.

This most interesting locality combines all the requisites of a summer retreat. The scenery is superb, and the view up and down the valley is of surpassing loveliness. It is on the Delaware and Lackawaxen Rivers, in the hunting and fishing region of Pike and Wayne Counties, Pa., and Sullivan County, N. Y. The attractions of this place are its pure air, its beautiful scenery, its fishing, its boating, and the general wildness that pervades the surroundings. Roads climb the surrounding hills, and lead to many a point of interest.

The "Westcolang Lake and Delaware River Park Association" has about four thousand five hundred acres of land located in Lackawaxen Township, Pike County, Pa., in the heart of the famous Pike County fishing and hunting region.

The object of the association is to keep this large and valuable tract as a game and fish preserve and private park. It has a large front on the Delaware River, and is unexcelled for the purposes to which it has been appropriated.

Another great advantage is its accessibility; Lackawaxen, a station on the main line of the Erie Railway, being within two miles of the park.

Westcolang Lake and Creek, included in this property, are noted for pickerel, black bass, and trout fishing; Spruce Swamp, in the western part of the preserve, is the resort of wild fowl. Extending for nearly a mile along Westcolang Creek is a glen rivaling in magnificence Shohola and Glen Onoko. This tract might well be called the "Hunter's Paradise," as game of all kinds is found in abundance.

A new club house is proposed in the near future and will be built upon a bluff several hundred feet above the Delaware River.

Half-way between Lackawaxen and Shohola is Panther Brook, with its charming glen and cataract, and its trout. A mile above the station is Lord's Brook, which forms a number of handsome falls a short distance back in the woods, and adds its quota of trout to the demand of the neighborhood. On the top of the ridge across the Delaware, a mile from Lackawaxen, is Mountain Lake, a large sheet of crystal water, well-stocked with pickerel. Beyond the crag that stands at the junction of the Delaware and Lackawaxen Valleys is Wescoline Lake, also famous for pickerel. Taylor's Brook is five miles distant; the Shohola fishing grounds, six; Beaver Brook, three miles; Blooming Grove, and its streams, lake, and hunting grounds, twelve miles, over a good road. Deer, bear, partridge, woodcock; bass, trout, pickerel, eels, cat-fish. No mosquitoes or malaria. The town has a population of 200. Good public schools, a Methodist and a Baptist church, and a well-stocked general store.

HOTELS AND BOARDING HOUSES.

DELAWARE HOUSE—WILLIAM HOLBERT, Manager—3 minutes' walk. On banks of Delaware, at junction of Lackawaxen. Accommodate 200; adults, $8 to $12, according to location; transient, $2; discount for season. Boating for a mile on river; black bass fishing in front of house; boats free to guests; best of references; guides at hand. This house is situated on the high bank of the Delaware River, at the picturesque spot where the Lackawaxen River forms a junction with that stream. It has been the summer abiding place of many of the best families of New York and Brooklyn for several seasons, and as a summer resort is second to none in the country. The house has been increased in size by the erection of a large addition, in which is included a large hall for amusements and dancing. The new building is fitted with all modern conveniences.

NEW YORK HOTEL—Captain EDWARD BUCK, Proprietor—House situated on high ground within 5 minutes' walk of station. 20 double rooms; adults, $7 to $10; children, $4 to $5; servants, $5; transient, $2 per day; discount for season. Livery and stable accommodation; good black bass fishing within five minutes of the house; boats and tackle, 50 cents per day; glen back of house; guides and dogs furnished; spring water.

NATIONAL HOTEL—(Temperance)—C. VAN BENSCHOTEN, Proprietor—Near; highest ground in the place. 15 single, 2 double rooms; adults, $6 to $8; children and servants, $5; $2 per day. Guides at hand.

MOUNTAIN LAKE FARM HOUSE—H. E. TWICHELL, Proprietor—1 mile; conveyance, 50 cents. 4 single, 9 double rooms; adults, $7; children, $3.50; servants, $5; transient, $1.25; discount for season. Good fishing; guides to the lake; boats free and livery on premises; prices reasonable; gunning in season.

BEAVER BROOK FARM HOUSE—Mrs. J. C. FREEMAN, Proprietress— $\frac{1}{4}$ mile; private conveyance, 50 cents. 2 single, 5 double sleeping rooms; adults, \$8; children, \$4; servants, \$5; transient, \$1.25; discount for season. Excellent fishing and gunning in season. House situated on bank of Delaware River, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Shohola Glen, the Erie's famous excursion resort, and is surrounded by fine drives and beautiful scenery.

A picturesque and healthy locality, with a population of 200, situated amidst surroundings similar to Lackawaxen, and the description of that place will apply equally to Mast Hope. It is very popular as a summer retreat, and has everything to recommend it to those who would spend the summer quietly in the midst of delightful surroundings. A good public school, a Baptist church, and well-stocked shops and stores.

The grounds of the "Forest Lake Association," situated in Lackawaxen Township, Pike County, Pa., embraces about fifteen hundred acres of forest land, and are four and one-half miles west of Mast Hope.

A large new club house has been erected and commands a beautiful view of the surrounding country, being situated on the highest part of the ridge of hills between the Delaware and Lackawaxen Rivers, and has an elevation of about fifteen hundred feet above sea level and seven hundred feet above the rivers mentioned.

To the west of the house, within easy walking distance, lie Wolf and Tink Ponds. To the east are the Big Corilla and the Little Corilla, the former being a lake a mile long by half a mile wide, and the latter a lakelet of about half this size; both entirely within the grounds of the association. Twenty acres around the house have been enclosed and are being cultivated for a lawn and pleasure ground.

The Big Corilla, Wolf Ponds, and the Little Corilla are plentifully supplied with fish. In season, ducks frequent the lakes; good woodcock, partridge, and quail shooting and deer hunting can be had in the woods of the association.

summer stopping-place. On the Delaware River at Big Eddy, the widest and deepest part of Delaware River above tide; literally, a large lake of pure spring water. Best of black bass fishing. Boating for two miles. Here, within a few years, has grown up a charming summer stopping-place. The population of the town is 600, with churches of various denominations, good public school, and several well-stocked stores. Narrowsburg gets its name from the Narrows in the Delaware, just above the station. Below the Narrows the river widens into what is known as Big Eddy, one of the broadest places on the stream, as well as the deepest above tide-water. The visitor who seeks the opportunity for boating that Big Eddy offers will doubtless be struck with the number of transparent bubbles he sees floating on or constantly rising to the surface. These bubbles are formed by an inflammable gas that arises from the bottom of the river; it also appears in the sand along the shore, and may be ignited, when it burns for a few seconds with a bright flame.

Narrowsburg is in the midst of such scenery as has already been described in the Delaware Valley. There are lakes and streams and mountains; splendid views and healthful air and water. There are ten mountain lakes within eight miles, and numerous trout streams in the vicinity. No mosquitoes or malaria; cool nights; deer hunting on surrounding ridges. Partridge shooting good; splendid drives; livery near station.

Before the completion of the Port Jervis, Monticello & New York Railroad, this station was well known as the railway point nearest White Lake, and some tourists still prefer this route, the drive from Cochection to White Lake being but fourteen miles, over a good road, and one rich in fine scenery. The population is about 600, with three public schools and a Methodist, a Baptist, and a Presbyterian church, with well-stocked general stores. The location of Cochection is well calculated to make it a popular summer retreat. The valley here is very wide, the Upper Delaware having nowhere such an extent of fertile plain.

Cochecton village is neat and cosy, and there is an air of pastoral ease about it that at once attracts the visitor.

There are several fine lakes in the mountains, within four miles of the station, affording both pickerel and trout fishing. Lake Huntington and Mitchell Lake, on the New York side, are noted places, with good roads leading to them from the station. Among the trout streams are Calkins' Brook, Bush's Creek, Tyler Brook, Beaver Dam Creek, and Mitchell Brook, all near at hand.

The Delaware River is crossed at Cochecton by a fine bridge. Three miles below Cochecton, Calkins' Creek comes into the Delaware on the Pennsylvania side. Here, in a romantic spot, is the neat village of Milanville.

Three miles from Cochecton, in Wayne County, and beyond the pretty village of Damascus, which lies along the river and climbs the rising ground opposite Cochecton, is the village of Tyler Hill, a collection of beautiful residences. The surroundings of this elevated vicinity are among the attractions of Cochecton. The visitor has before him the beautiful country up and down the Delaware; the rolling land to the westward, with many high mountain peaks looking down into fertile valleys, and intervening stretches of wood and farm. The distant mountains of Sullivan County bound the river on the east.

In the midst of surroundings of a wild and rugged character. Callicoon has a population of 1200, an excellent graded public school, numerous churches, and good stores and shops, which are always well stocked. It is the centre of one of the famous trout regions of the Delaware Valley. The Callicoon Creek, which enters the Delaware a short distance below the station, threads the back wilderness and a splendid farming section. Along its entire course, from the hills on either side, tributary streams flow into it at short intervals. The main stream and its feeders are natural trout creeks, and all the season long they afford royal sport to the angler. All these brooks are within five miles of the station. On the Pennsylvania side of the river is Hollister Creek. For two miles from the river this creek flows through a wild and narrow gorge, and seeks the level of the river by a series of wonderful waterfalls. The borders of the creek are thickly grown with rhododendrons, and the early summer fills the glen with bands of pink-tinted bloom.

Numerous lakes cluster in the hills on both sides of the river, the famous Bethel township lakes, in Sullivan County, being within easy reach. In Wayne County, Galilee Lake, Duck Harbor, Swago Lake and others are near and convenient of access. Bass, pickerel, and perch fishing are attractions of these waters. No malaria or mosquitoes.

A quiet, healthful village, named from a particular configuration of the Delaware, upon the banks of which the town is situated. Population, 400. The bass fishing in the river is fine, and on the outlying wooded hills are many trout streams and bass and pickerel lakes, and, in the season, plenty of game, both large and small.

A quiet hamlet among the upper Delaware mountains, with a population of 150, a public school, and several good general stores. Churches of various denominations within easy reach by fine, hard wagon roads or romantic walks. The outlying country, back on the hills, is charming and healthful, with delightful scenery and the best of trout and bass fishing. Deer, partridge, and small game in season. Long, Basket, Mott, and Low Ponds; Back Brook; Hankins, Basket, Centre, Trout, and other creeks in the vicinity. No malaria or mosquitoes.

There is a good public school, a fine new Methodist church. The place has an excellent system of public water works, supplied by pure mountain springs, and good general stores. No gnats, mosquitoes, or malaria; unexcelled scenery, and the home of many New Yorkers, who have built handsome summer cottages at this place.

In a prosperous lumbering section of the Delaware Valley, with abundance of rugged mountain scenery. Trout streams near at hand, and the best of bass fishing in Delaware River. Good sport with dog and gun. This is the station for Equinunk, Wayne County, Pa., one mile distant on the opposite bank of the river, and easily reached by means of a well-kept roadway which crosses the river on a substantial suspension bridge. Equinunk is located in the midst of healthful and romantic surroundings, and is one of the most popular Erie resorts. Pure, cool, mountain air; nights cool during the hottest season; excellent water; malaria unknown. The best of fishing and gunning; delightful drives and rambles in every direction. Population, 400. A Methodist church, good public and private schools, and plenty of well-stocked stores.

Two responsible citizens of the town, the Hon. W. M. Nelson and Mr. H. N. Farley, authorize us to state that they will, for one dollar, give to any responsible person who will erect and maintain a respectable house for the accommodation of a certain number of summer guests, a deed for five acres of land, situated near the village, on an eminence overlooking a charming landscape; or, on the same terms, a deed for half an acre for a summer residence for a family.

The Mohawk, or west branch of the Delaware River, rises on the southern slope of a spur of the Catskills, in Schoharie County, N. Y. The Popacton, or east branch, has its head in the wilderness of upper Ulster County. The two branches run nearly parallel across Delaware County, being divided by a ridge of mountains eleven miles wide, and meet around the base of a great dome-like hill at Hancock. This spot was called She-haw-ken by the Indians, which means "where the waters meet." The village here was formerly called by that name. Hancock, the present village, is surrounded by the loftiest elevations of the Delaware Highlands, all of which are heavily wooded. At no point along the river is the scenery more grand. Hancock is a neat and beautifully located place, and is the centre of the great lumber region of the upper Delaware. The population of the town is about 4000, and of the village about 1000. There is an excellent graded public school with five teachers, numerous churches of every denomination, and stores and shops of all kinds.

Hancock is literally surrounded by trout streams, there being no less than eleven within convenient reach. Cadosia, Reeds, Sands, Shehawken, Trout, Pease Eddy, and Tyler Creeks are among them. The Beaver Kill is only twelve miles distant. The scenery on and about these streams is grand—falls, glens, and wild ravines being met with at short intervals. Hancock is one of the most popular mountain resorts in the country. There are many fine lakes in the vicinity. Deer, bear, partridge; black bass in the Delaware. Good livery accommodations.

Deposit is a thriving village, surrounded by high hills, from the summits of which delightful views of the surrounding country are to be had, and has a population of 2000 persons. It has a graded school with full academic course and eight experienced teachers; churches of various denominations; stores of all kinds; a fine system of water works; streets lighted; telephone exchange and opera house; situated 1000 feet above tide, and is noted for its dairying products. Three miles from Deposit is a mountain lake, nearly a mile long, surrounded with woods of beech, maple, and pine, the clear, cold waters of which are well stocked with game fish of every variety. This lake is called Oquaga. B. F. Taylor says very truly: "If there is a more restful place than this outside 'God's acres,' I have failed to find it;" and he adds: "The mountain road to the lake is picturesque enough to lead to Paradise."

The first station on the Honesdale Branch is Rowlands, a healthy hamlet of 400 inhabitants, with delightful surroundings in the way of hills, dales, ravines, and glens, and with mountain lakes and streams without number, all stocked with the best of game-fish. The entire region is healthful, and the scenery picturesque to an extreme, which, together with the exceptional facilities afforded for fishing and gunning, offers rare inducements to summer visitors. There is a good school at the village, a Methodist church, and well-stocked general and grocery stores.

Four miles from the village are two beautiful little lakes known as Lake Tideusking and Wolf Lake. The owner of these lakes also owns a large surrounding tract of land, which he has divided into good-sized lots for building purposes, and these may be obtained at extremely low rates. For persons desiring to possess a permanent summer-home, unusual advantages are offered at this place, as an investigation will prove.

Seven miles from Lackawaxen is the village of Millville, where the Blooming Grove Creek enters the Lackawaxen. The surroundings are delightfully picturesque. Millville has a population of 400, good public schools, a Methodist church, and good general stores. Near Millville is the princely domain of the Blooming Grove Park Association. The property of the Association consists of 12,000 acres of wild mountain and valley lands, well adapted for the rearing and preservation of game. The region is as romantic and healthy as the Adirondacks, and it is destined to become as great a resort for summer idlers as the wilderness immortalized by the pen of Murray. Within its boundaries there are several miles of trout streams and eight beautiful lakes stocked with black bass and other fish. On the high bank of the clearest and fairest of this chain of lakes a club-house has been built, and furnished with accommodations for eighty people. The point is 1500 feet above tide-water, and it is free from malaria and mosquitoes. The association is dual in character. It admits women to all of its privileges. The anglers and hunters take their wives and children into the woods with them. From the balconies of the club-house a magnificent view is obtained; the eye wanders over lakes and hills, and in the dim distance rests upon the tops of the Catskill Mountains. Seven hundred acres of the forest have been enclosed with stone and wire fence, and within it elk, deer, and other game are bred. The shooting in Blooming Grove Park consists of deer, black bear, woodcock, ruffed grouse, hares, rabbits, ducks, and snipe. The spot is so attractive and so easy of access that it cannot fail to grow in popularity. Tink, Big and Little Corilla, Knob, White Deer, and Jones Lakes are within a radius of seven miles. Several picturesque waterfalls near. Livery may be had at Millville, where there are also first-class hotel accommodations.

A charming village of 5000 inhabitants, situate on the boundary between Wayne and Pike Counties, in a country that offers great attractions to the tourist. All around Hawley the sportsman will find the finest of lakes and streams and noted game haunts. The Wallenpaupack River, its head-waters interlocking with those of the Lehigh far back in the Pocono Wilderness, enters the Lackawaxen at Hawley. Its flow, until it reaches within a mile and a half of that place, is deep and sluggish. At the point named a series of the most magnificent falls commences. The first plunge of the water is over a precipice of seventy-five feet, and from there on to the last fall, a half mile above its mouth, the descent of the stream is two hundred and fifty feet. The grand fall, a portion of it visible from the railroad, but mostly hidden by a cluster of mills and factories, is about eighty feet high and fifty in width, the ledge over which it thunders having been worn in horse-shoe form. There are good schools, both public and private ; churches of various denominations, and shops and stores of every variety, all carrying full lines of goods. The variety of fish and game about here is large, and consists of trout, bass, and pickerel ; deer, bear, fox, partridge, rabbits. Hawley is also the station for Blooming Grove Park. Good hotels and livery. Jones Lake, a famous picnic resort, and a beautiful sheet of water, is but six miles distant. It has two elegant summer hotels located on its shore.

From Hawley the Erie and Wyoming Valley Railroad extends through the romantic region lying between the Lackawaxen, Lackawanna, and Wyoming Valleys. The Moosic Mountains, a spur of the Alleghenies, and one of the loftiest mountain chains in the State, offer great attractions to the summer sojourner. There are many streams, waterfalls, and lakes. The country is densely wooded. The sportsman will find ample opportunity along this branch of the Erie for the exercise of his skill with both rod and gun.

One of the handsomest and wealthiest villages in Pennsylvania. Lackawaxen and Dyberry rivers run through the place. Streets broad and bordered with maples and elms. Excellent drives. Bethany, 3 miles; Mart Kimble's, 2 miles; White Mills, 5 miles; Waymart, 10 miles. Beautiful park of maples in centre of village. Twelve famous bass and pickerel lakes within from 6 to 14 miles. Trout fishing within 2 to 5 miles. Terminus of the celebrated Gravity road owned by the Delaware & Hudson Railroad. This road extends to Carbondale, 17 miles, in the upper Lackawanna coal regions, and is now one of the most popular excursion railroads in America. The cars run up and down the high hills, there being no motive power perceptible to the tourist. At one point an elevation of 2000 feet above tide is reached. The ride is exhilarating, grand, indescribable, and hundreds of tourists enjoy it daily during the summer and autumn months. The Honesdale livery accommodations are excellent.

Honesdale is situated between high hills, on a plain through which two romantic mountain streams flow, uniting in the village and forming the Lackawaxen River. There are two wide basins where the streams unite, and the water is formed into the most picturesque lakes. From the eastern shore of one of these, Lake Dyberry, a solid ledge of serried and moss-grown slate rock rises almost sheer to the height of nearly 400 feet. The village itself is 800 feet above the sea-level.

The New York Tribune, in its issue of April 17th, 1885, speaks as follows of Honesdale: "Philip Hone, who was probably the courtliest mayor New York ever had, was the first president of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company. The beautiful village that sprung from the woods at the head of the canal in Wayne County, Pa., near the coal mines, was called Honesdale in his honor. In the summer of 1844, Philip Hone, John Jacob Astor, and other eminent gentlemen interested in the canal, invited Washington Irving to join them in a junketing trip from New York to Rondout, and then by private packet from that place up the canal to Honesdale. A boat was fitted up in the most elegant manner to carry them." The trip was described in a letter from Irving to his sister in glowing terms. This beautiful blending of rock, lake, and stream elicited many expressions of delight from him, and he insisted on scaling the rocky height in order to study the surrounding scenery. The entire company climbed to the summit by a circuitous route. The delight of Irving was so great when he had reached the summit—from which the country for a hundred miles around is spread beneath the eye—that Philip Hone insisted that the ledge be known as Irving Cliff, and that Washington Irving christen it as such. This he did by breaking a bottle of champagne on the rock. A maple-bordered road extending along the base of the cliff, between it and the water, Irving named Ladywood Lane, a name it bears to this day. Honesdale has a population of 7000, many good schools and churches of the various denominations, also good stores and shops of all kinds.

Piermont derives its name from the long pier which extends for a mile out into the waters of the Hudson. The town is located round about the high elevation which marks the northern boundary of the valley of the Sparkill, and, aside from the scenic attractions of this valley, which is the only natural approach to the Hudson from the west between Weehawken and Nyack, the local attractions of the town site itself are extremely charming. The views of the surrounding country, which are obtained from some of the more elevated portions of the town, are unexcelled anywhere, and few portions of the country afford greater attractions to lovers of the beautiful.

Piermont has a population of about 1600. There are four good schools, two public and two private, and four churches—a Methodist, a Baptist, a Catholic, and a Dutch Reformed—and good stores well stocked. A plentiful supply of pure water is obtained from both springs and wells. The town is naturally drained and is exceptionally healthy, chills and malaria being unknown in the vicinity. There is splendid fishing, both in the river and in the mountain streams which wind around among the hills, and there is good hunting in season. The celebrated Rockland Lake is near at hand, and the road leading to it affords one of the most enjoyable of the myriad of romantic drives which are common to the neighborhood. There are also many delightful walks, and the Tappan Zee presents a choice spot for bathing and boating in the summer, and for ice yachting and skating in winter.

BOARDING HOUSES.

Perched on the high, overlooking hills which mark the northernmost limit of the Palisade ridge, or nestled along either slope of a charming valley, which, extending westward up among the mountains, affords a passage-way for the Sparkill Creek, and surrounded by forest-covered hills among which meander romantic streams, Sparkill is not only topographically beautiful, but the architectural beauty of her residences, and the neat and attractive appearance of the grounds which surround them, all combine to render this one of the most charming of inland villages, and a choice spot for summer residence.

Within the northern boundary of the town is a lofty hill called Mount Nebo, a delightfully romantic locality, with moss and lichen-covered rocks and ledges, open glades carpeted with velvet grass, sequestered glens and miniature valleys—all scattered about in the midst of a garniture of primeval forest of noble growth. It is here that one of the most picturesquely beautiful of all "God's acres" is laid out—Rockland Cemetery. From the top of Mount Nebo a truly magnificent view of the surrounding country is to be had. The picture thus spread out to view is limited only by the waters of Long Island Sound, the Atlantic Ocean, the Staten Island hills, the hazy blue of the Pennsylvania mountains and the Alleghenies, the Ramapo range, the Hudson Highlands and the Catskills, and comprehends the entire diversified landscape which lies within these boundaries; and the view from the crest of the Palisade ridge, a short mile distant, is equally fine.

There are any number of fine drives over clean, hard, broad roads to pleasant local resorts, and there are enjoyable walks in every direction. The neighboring streams are well stocked with game fish of every variety, and there is excellent sport for the hunter among the hills or along the creek bottoms. Health has its home in this region, and chills are unknown. The air is pure and salubrious, and beneficial to invalids and those to whom the climate nearer the salt water seems harsh and unfriendly. The town itself has a natural drainage which is simply perfect, and an abundance of pure cold water. Population, 500; good public schools. There is one church—an Episcopalian—and good general stores.

Here is a neighborhood where one of the earliest settlements in New Jersey was made. Bloomfield is a charming village, with a population of 7500. The surroundings are quiet, pastoral, and healthful. Enjoyable drives over clean, hard roads, and pleasant rambles in many directions. Good fishing and gunning near at hand. The place is connected with Newark by horse railroad. There are several churches, and superior educational institutions. A popular resort in summer.

New York has no handsomer or more healthful suburb than Montclair. The village is built on a succession of terraces, which here characterize the eastern slope of the Orange Mountains, and has climbed to the very summit of the mountain range; and all that correct taste could suggest and wealth supply has been used in its improvement. The population is about 9000. There are numerous churches and excellent schools, both public and private, a newspaper, good stores of all kinds, and a well-stocked public library. Its sanitary condition is unsurpassed. The water is pure and plenty, and the view of the surrounding country from the heights west of the village is extremely beautiful, encompassing as it does New York Bay, the Narrows, and the line of the Hudson River for miles. Parties seeking a convenient and charming place to spend the summer months will find Montclair exactly suited to their wants.

At this place the general elevation is higher than at any other point within the same distance of the city in any direction. The mountain ranges are here first encountered by the railroad. It is a region of delightful views, drives, and walks in the woods and hills. A quarter of a mile from the station, the elevation is 300 feet above the railroad and 650 above tide. The water here is from pure springs. There is one store and communication with the markets of Montclair is easy. The place is growing rapidly and much building is now under way. Population, 300; with good public schools and a kindergarten excellently conducted. Numerous churches near at hand. The Episcopal stone chapel and the Congregational church at Upper Montclair are deservedly a source of pride to the residents. A more charming spot for a residence or summer abiding place it would be hard to find; and although no large boarding houses are open for the accommodation of guests, board may be secured with private families at reasonable rates.

The station gets its name from a charming cataract, which is hidden from sight in a grove of pines, a short distance from the railroad. The Falls are on the Passaic that here winds its way down from the wild-looking hills that rise in rugged outline to the westward. The surroundings are extremely picturesque, and during the summer they are visited by many from all parts of the country. There is good fishing and boating, and the spot possesses all the requirements of a favorite summer resort. Population, 1800; with churches of the Methodist and Dutch Reformed denominations, a public school, and good shops and stores near at hand. The power furnished by the Falls has been utilized by several extensive factories.

Overlooked by high rocky hills covered with cedars, which also rise in fantastic groves on every side, this station cannot fail to attract all who love Nature in her wild as well as her more tender moods. It has a population of 250 persons; two public schools and one private school; churches of different denominations, and good general stores. The rugged Wanaque Mountains rise on the west. From one bold peak of the range known as Federal Hill, a great portion of eastern New Jersey is brought beneath the eye. Pompton Lake, east of the station, lies in a vale, surrounded by a picturesque bordering of hemlocks and cedars. There is another lake, but smaller, half a mile from Pompton Junction, where there is the best of fishing, bathing, and boating. The view northward, into the wild and mountainous Wanaque region, is one of the finest in the country.

From Pompton Junction the road begins the ascent of the Wanaque Mountains, and the ride from there to Greenwood Lake is through a wildly picturesque country.

Named after New York's mayor; but three-quarters of a mile removed from Greenwood Lake. Located in the midst of a primeval forest, with numerous small streams, Hewitt offers many attractions to the sportsman and also to those who desire a quiet, retired resting-place for the summer within easy access of the great metropolis. The hunting is all that could be asked, and in their season, grouse, partridge, and squirrels, as well as larger game, may be found here in abundance. Greenwood Lake has long been known as a good fishing-ground, and being so near, the sojourner at Hewitt finds it but a pleasant ramble to this beautiful sheet of water, where fine strings of black bass and pickerel reward the efforts

The first station east of Hewitt and but two and a half miles distant therefrom, a general description of the natural surroundings of the latter would apply also to Monks. The hunting and fishing is excellent, and affords much pleasure to

of the disciples of Izaak Walton, and in the streams close at hand, "speckled beauties" invite the fisherman's skill. Population, 500. Two good public schools; Methodist and Presbyterian churches; three general stores, well stocked.

The village of Greenwood Lake is situated at the head of the lake from which it derives its name—one of the most picturesquely beautiful sheets of water on the continent. Located partly in Orange County, N. Y., and partly in Passaic County, N. J., in the midst of a primeval forest, and surrounded by towering hills and mountains, this “LOCH KATRINE OF THE AMERICAN TROSACHS” presents scenic attractions of no mean order; and, with its surroundings and appointments, possesses unrivaled attractions to those who seek rest, health, or recreation in the midst of rural beauty.

The lake itself is a thousand feet above tide-water, and its waters are deep, clear, and cold—prime requisites for the comfort and perfect development of its finny inhabitants; and it has always been held in high esteem as a superior fishing ground. Here the angler will find game fish of every variety—bass, pike, and pickerel being the most prominent.

For the accommodation and entertainment of visitors, there are several well-appointed hotels, located at convenient intervals on most favorable and attractive sites along the shores of the lake, and the transient or permanent visitor will find every accommodation and convenience, and at moderate cost; while hunting or fishing parties who desire to bring their own equipage, and try a season of "roughing it," will find along the shores, or upon the wooded islands in the lake, any number of choice spots especially adapted to camping out. He who can stop in this charming region for the season, or for a few days only, will discover ample occupation for many an idle hour in whichever direction his fancy may lead him. Here, at the lake itself, he will find every facility for rowing, sailing, fishing, and bathing; and in the adjacent mountains, easily reached by quiet, shaded pathways, are many romantic ravines and dells, their rocky walls garnished with beautiful mosses, ferns, and wild flowers. Though near at hand, these mountain wilds are so sequestered that they offer a safe brooding place for the game birds, and almost at every turn the visitor will "flush" a covey of quail or a mother partridge and her family, while the song of the wild bird greets him at every hand.

There are many pleasant drives about Greenwood Lake, the most interesting, perhaps, being to Point Peter, an elevation of the Bellevale Mountain, and a famous point of observation on the Trosachs excursion route, and to Sterling Lake, a beautiful body of water located in a deep basin surrounded by high mountains. Take it all in all, there are few places of resort within convenient reach of New York that offer such a variety of attractions to the pleasure seeker, and the time is not far distant when it will be one of the most thoroughly visited resorts on the continent. The town has a population of 600, two good schools, one public and one private; a Methodist and a Union church, and two good general stores.

WARWICK WOODLANDS,

The property of the Greenwood Lake Improvement Company, is situated on the woodland of Greenwood Lake, and occupies one of the choicest sites on the lake. This property, which comprises some eight hundred and fifty acres, with a lake frontage of nearly three miles, has been laid out in desirable building lots, which are rapidly being secured for summer villas and cottages; and is now a model summer village. Within less than an hour's walk from this portion of the lake, reached by a wildly picturesque ramble around the face of the mountain overlooking the lake, is a miniature glen situated in the midst of a timber growth so dense as to shut out almost entirely the rays of the sun, and give to the spot a twilight shade that is enchantingly weird. Through a rift in the rock splashes and tumbles a mountain stream in a series of rapids, cascades, and waterfalls, which, though diminutive in size, help to form a picture exceptionally romantic and beautiful, and well worth a visit. On a well-wooded plateau which here marks the base of the mountain, is the Frank Forester House and the elegant club-house of the Greenwood Lake Association; and near at hand are several handsome cottages, the property of certain members of the association.

Orange is one of the most charming places of resort convenient to New York City; it lies along a succession of natural terraces which lead back from the level of the valley quite to the crest of the Orange mountains, and the handsome residences and elaborate grounds give evidence of a comfortable and cultured community. The town has a natural drainage which has been so improved by art that its sanitary condition is perfect, and this, together with the pure mountain air and salubrious climate, combines to render the entire locality the home of health.

One of the most enjoyable features of this delightful place is Llewellyn Park, an enclosure of some 800 acres, and the home of a number of families whose elaborate residences, embowered in the midst of a collection of rare trees, plants, and flowers, are among the handsomest in the city. There are any number of enjoyable drives in every direction, and from the more elevated portions of the town delightful views are obtained, but the crowning glory of the landscape is presented by the outlook from Eagle Rock. This is a lofty hill, 600 feet in height, and the view obtained from the summit is one the visitor will never forget. The population of Orange is 45,000; there are churches of every denomination, a splendid public school system, also excellent private schools, and shops and stores of every variety.

Between "The Oranges" and New York a greatly increased train service has been established via the New York and Greenwood Lake Railway, nineteen trains being run each way on week days, twelve of them express trains making no stops on Main Line, and four trains each way on Sundays. These trains are unsurpassed for elegance of appointments, the coaches are new and of artistic design, the locomotives are of the latest approved pattern for burning hard coal, and the entire equipment comprises all the modern appliances essential to safety, speed, and comfort.

In addition to all this, passengers can purchase single-trip or excursion tickets, at rates quoted above, between Orange and New York, which include, without extra charge, the street car fare on the Orange Cross-Town Street Railway (from Scotland Street, via Central Avenue, Cone and Day Streets, to or from Day—Washington Street Station on the Greenwood Lake Railway), or the stage line fare on the lines running from Central Avenue, via Harrison and Washington Streets, to or from Washington Street Station, and from Halstead Street near Main, via Prospect Street, to or from Prospect Street Station on Greenwood Lake Railway.

HOTELS.

CENTRAL HOTEL— $\frac{1}{2}$ mile from Main Street station. 6 single, 34 double sleeping rooms; adults, \$5.50 to \$10.50; children, \$3.50 to \$6; servants, \$5; transient, \$1 to \$1.50 per day; discount for season. Excellent stabling accommodations and livery at reasonable rates.

THIS Map exhibits in detail the topography of the country in which the many superior Summer Resting Places of the ERIE are located. Its attractions are as diversified as they are picturesque and beautiful. MOUNTAIN and LAKE and STREAM RAPID, CASCADE and CATARACT, with ROLLING FARM-LAND and PRIMEVAL FOREST, combine to render this region especially and peculiarly a sanctuary during the hot summer months to those who seek
